

The Gift of Gratitude
Reflecting on a Year of Growth

MAXWELL
LEADERSHIP

As we step into the holiday season, I love getting the opportunity to take some time to think back on all that God has given me and all that I have accomplished throughout the year. There is so much to be thankful for and I wanted to gift you a Gratitude Reflection this Thanksgiving that will help you to pause, reflect, and be grateful for the growth that you have experienced this year!

In order to continue being the best leaders we can be, I believe that it's important to us to remember the ways in which we have grown and then allow that growth to keep us moving forward. I encourage you to be intentional with this time of reflection, and you'll be surprised by the impact it'll have on your life and leadership.

Your friend,
John C. Maxwell

REFLECTION QUESTIONS:

1. What leadership quality do you feel like you have grown the most in this year and why?
2. Which accomplishment or opportunity that you've experienced this year are you most proud of?
3. Did you set a goal for yourself/your leadership last year that you accomplished this year? If so, what was it?
4. What has been the biggest area of growth in your personal life and professional life this year?
